SCORE 50-MILE ADVANCE

Germans Admit 'Grand-Scale' Attack Threatens to Pin Them Down in Russia.

(By International News Service)

MOSCOW — Smashing relentlessly against German lines in the vicinity of Stalingrad in the greatest Soviet drive since last year's winter offensive, Red army troops today drove steadily forward both northwest and south of the Volga metropolis, inflicting heavy casualties on the Nazis.

The official German news agency, DNB, admitted in a broadcast from Berlin that the Russians had launched "grand-scale" actions on both sides of Stalingrad and said that American and British tanks were being used in the offensive.)

Two more German storm battalions were routed northwest of Stalingrad and considerable war material was captured in continued heavy blows struck by the Red army under command of Marshal Semyon Timoshenko, the Soviet high command announced at noon.

South of the bomb and shell ruined Volga city the resurgent Russian forces, capturing dozens of inhabited localities, pressed steadily ahead, inflicting severe new losses on the battered German units.

The gigantic twin assaults already have cost the Germans more than 15 000 dead and tens of thousands of the enemy have been cut off from supplies and reinforcements east of the Don river bend by thrusts which severed key railway lines

In the drive northwest of Stalingrad, the Soviets scored a 50-mile southward advance to capture the town of Kalach on the east bank of the Don

The noon communique said that the Germans had made two attacks in the Stalingrad factory area during the night but that both assaults were repulsed

In the mid-Caucasus Soviet artillery batteries destroyed seven German strongpoints southeast of Nalchik.

On the northwestern front, it was said, the Russians occupied

10 Named, Four Temporarily, For Area Rent Staff

A staff of 10 persons, including four serving under temporary appointment, had been named today for the Mansfield area rent office, Acting Director Morton B. Hayman announced.

W. C. Mansfield, real estate dealer, was named rent examiner, and Stanley B. Hout, 143 Arthur avenue, was appointed area rent inspector.

Mrs. Thelma E Miller, Mansfield, was named junior stenographer in the rental headquarters in the R. B. Gardner showrooms.

Attorney George H. Blecker, rent attorney, and Mrs. Betty Gurney Edwards, secretary in his office, had previously been appointed.

Hayman, who is in charge of the office following the resignation of LeRoy B. Hamilton as director, said appointment of the four clerks and typists serving under a temporary arrangement, would not be official until approved by the Office of Price administration in Cleveland. Hayman withheld their names pending receipt of OPA approval.

The district office here was in full scale operation today and it will be open Thanksgiving day with a skeleton staff, Hayman said.

Hayman will continue to direct the rent control activities in the Mansfield area until a permanent director is appointed to succeed Hamilton.

Apply For Extra Gas Books Today

Those In A Through C Class Start Filing At Simpson.

Mansfield and Richland county motorists, excepting those living in four townships served by the Shelby registration district, today began registering at John Simpson Junior high school gymnasium for supplemental gasoline ration books

Applicants are cautioned to use only the east entrance of the school building and are reminded that registration hours are from 1 to 5 p. m. and 6 to 9 p. m.

Those with last names beginning with the letters A, B or C were to register this afternoon and evening. Tuesday's registration will be for the name group D to G inclusive; Wednesday H to L inclusive; Friday M through Q; Saturday R and S; Monday, Nov. 30, T through Z.

Chairman W. J. Spreng of the gasoline panel in the Richland county rationing board announced today that farmers will register for their highway and non-highway gasoline needs at John Simpson school this week, and not at the rationing board offices on North Mulberry street.

Applicants whose records are complete and meritorious, Spreng said today, will be given their supplemental book or books immediately upon registering. Challenged applications will be reviewed by the gasoline panel and a board of review, the final decision being mailed to the applicant.

The Shelby registration site is the Lutheran church on Route 39 just south of Main street and will accommodate applicants from Sharon, Jackson, Cass and Plymouth townships.

Tabulation of last week's registration for A books had not been completed today but the unofficial figures for Mansfield on Saturday showed 9,244 motorists had applied, indicating that more than 6 000 in the city will seek supplemental ration books.

Some tardy A book applicants registered today although Office of Price Administration regulations authorized deferment of registration in such cases until after rationing begins Dec. 1.

AWAIT VOTE

Senators Expect Ballot to Kill Anti-Poll Tax Bill.

WASHINGTON —(AP)— Opponents counted on a senate vote today to discourage any future congressional moves to outlaw state poll taxes in federal elections.

Senator Connally (D., Tex.) told reporters he was confident the senate would decline to invoke a seldom-used rule limiting debate and thereby not only would send a pending bill to its legislative death but would register two strikes against any similar measure in the future.

"I don't think they can invoke cloture against us and when they fail to do that they ought to know that it would be a waste of time to bring it up in the next congress at any other time," Connally declared.

REPORT PEACE MOVE HEADED BY BADOGLIO

London Hears Former Head of Italian Army Seeking Separate Armistice.

(By International News Service)

LONDON—A report that Marshal Pietro Badoglio former chief of staff of the Italian army has headed a movement to negotiate a separate peace for Italy reached London today.

A Reuter dispatch from Ankara quoted travelers from Italy as telling of the movement.

Badoglio, who is known to have bitterly opposed Premier Mussolini's military alliance with Nazi Germany and his attack upon France, was described in the dispatch as "leader of a group of anti-Fascists."

This group, it was said, approached the Vatican with a request that Pope Pius step in as mediator and get Italy out of the war before the country collapses entirely Badoglio's approach was said to have been made with the full knowledge of King Victor Emanuel, Crown Prince Umberto and Count Galeazzo Ciano, Mussolini's foreign minister and son-in-law.

When Mussolini heard of the movement he was said to have broken with Ciano in a violent quarrel, although no official announcement has been made of a cabinet shake-up In any case, the Badoglio movement is believed to have been the background for recent attacks upon the Vatican on the part of the newspaper Regime Fascista official organ of Mussolini's blackshirt party

Credited with being the greatest military strategist Italy has produced in modern times, Badoglio has always been known as an anti-Fascist and a staunch supporter of the Italian royal Morocco Reports Axis Prisoners Being Brought In As Allies Hurl Big Attack At Rommel's Lines Around Tunisian Bases.

(By Associated Press)

LONDON—The British First army, with American and French support, was reported today to have launched a big attack against the German-Italian positions in the defense perimeter of Bizerte and Tunis where Marshal Erwin Rommel, one-time German master of of African desert warfare, was said to be in command with perhaps a part of his Africa Corps.

The radio in Allied-held Morocco said prisoners already had been brought in as a result of the British attack which the Allies have been preparing for a week, and Berlin broadcasts hinted that Rommel had transferred his headquarters and perhaps some of his Libyan forces to Tunisia.

Previously the British and American forces which had streamed across North Africa for hundreds of miles in a race to get control of Tunisia's middle Mediterranean bases were reported to have tested the defenses in the northern tip of the French protectorate, and Radio Morocco quoted an Allied spokesman as saying their attacks were growing in violence.

The broadcast said that one clash occurred 22 miles south of the coast and that the engagement "remained indecisive."

Italians were well established with a strong air force at Bizerte and Tunis and it was apparent that the Axis was going to make a fight to retain dominance of the Sicilian straits.

"Allied forces have launched an attack against enemy armored forces entrenched around the towns of Tunis and Bizerte," said the Morocco radio announcement this morning.

"The main Allied forces are being actively brought up to the front to attack the whole of the Axis occupied positions The first prisoners have been brought back to the rear."

French reports told of attempted Axis infiltrations in South Tunisia and other reports from Allied headquarters in North Africa said similar tactics were being attempted from the north, where the main Axis forces have been landed by sea and air.

"These suggested that Rommel, who more than once has foiled Allied strategems to trap him, was attempting a flank attack from Tripolitania against the British and American forces converging on the northern tip of Tunisia.

If Rommel has split his forces, it was presumed here that he had dispatched some armored units from Tripoli, either overland or by sea, to Gabes or Sfax on the east Tunisian coast.

Both lie south and southeast of the routes of the main Allied forces driving eastward from Algeria, but pro-Allied French forces have been reported in control along most of the coast, and, according to French North African

TOTTERING: Buna Due To Fall As Yanks Close In On 3 Sides

(By International News Service)

UNITED NATIONS HEADQUARTERS IN AUSTRALIA —Allied capture of Buna, one of the last remaining Jap garrisons in northeastern New Guinea, appeared imminent today as American forces threatened dwindling Jap positions from three sides.

Japanese troops in both the Buna and Gona areas were making a last stand against fiercely attacking American and Australian forces while Flying Fortresses sank a Jap destroyer apparently attempting to land reinforcements at Buna, the Allied command announced today.

Nineteen enemy planes were destroyed in air combat and on the ground in New Guinea yesterday a communique said.

Buna's fall was anticipated with news that green-clad jungle-toughened Yanks captured a Jap airdrome in that area, apparently hastily built in the Japanese's second line of defense American forces, threatening the town itself from all three land sides, were attacking the main Buna airdrome in force, it was announced

Yank troops were also disclosed to be engaged in hot fighting at Buna mission, about a mile from the town.

Meanwhile, Aussie forces driving the Japs toward the sea at Gona were disclosed to have sent a patrol into Gona itself, inflicting heavy casualties before rejoining the main body.

While the most bitter fighting

SHIFT: RAF Swings Attack To Germany, Smashes At Stuttgart

(By Associated Press)

LONDON—The German industrial and communications center of Stuttgart was attacked last night by a strong force of British troops, and the air ministry said tha low-level observation showed that the results "were good."

"Ten of our bombers are missing," the ministry said.

Fighter command aircraft were reported to have attacked freight trains in northern France and fired an Axis supply ship in the English channel further blows against Adolf Hitler's crippled transport systems.

The capital of Wuerttemberg province, Stuggart lies approximately 100 miles southeast of Dover. A center of aviation and electrical industries, it was attacked three nights in succession by the RAF last May.

Submarine and aircraft engine plants are located at Stuttgart. The city is also an important railway junction.

It was the first RAF raid upon Germany since the night of Nov. 9, when Hamburg and other places in northwestern reaches of the reich were attacked.

Air raid alarms were sounded in Switzerland during the night, which may have been caused by a raid on southern Germany.

broadcosts some British and American forces had joined these French allies.

A North African broadcast, purporting to quote a pro-Allied French communique, said German infiltration units had been thrown out of the oasis of Gafsa west of Gabes, but other infiltrations were being attempted as far north as Kairouan, 75 miles south of Tunis.

The Berlin radio, in a consoling tone, thus referred to Rommel:

"With Tunisia, Rommel has exchanged a useless strip of desert for a battlezone akin to European conditions. Nothing proves more clearly Rommel's strategical genius than this move, carried out as soon as he realized the enemy's intentions.

"In this way the balance has shifted from east to west. Rommel's African corps now has taken up positions prepared beforehand."

A communique from Cairo said his forces in Libya were pushed back farther yesterday toward the Al Agheila bottleneck, the last good place for a stand short of Tripoli.

While Axis announcements indicated that Algerians and Allied forces there were under frequent air attack, Gen. Eisenhower's headquarters and Cairo headquarters showed that the Axis bases at Tripoli, Tunis and Bizerte were being heavily pounded by American four-motored bombers, Allied medium bombers and twin-engined fighters attacking from both the east and west.

U. S. Flying Fortresses and twin-motored Lockheed P-38 fighters of Maj. Gen. James H. Doolittle's command blasted hangars and warehouses of the German-occupied airfield at Tunis Saturday and destroyed nine planes.

The bombers accounted for three Messerschmitts. In action for the first time against the Germans, the Lockheeds shot down one and drove off the remainder. Field observers took this performance as an indication that they are equal to the best in the Nazi air force.

Heavy damage was declared inflicted on a Nazi armored column by one of the British advance detachments pushing along the north coast of Tunisie toward Bizerte. A headquarters spokesman said clashes in that area are "growing heavier."

The communique disclosed no details and there was similar reticience concerning a successful stand by Allied Frenchmen against two vigorous German attacks. Apparently referring to the same action, an unconfirmed report broadcast by the Morocco radio said the French had repulsed a local enemy drive "on the western front," destroyed four tanks and captured prisoners.

The Morocco radio also declared that "German detachments coming from Tripolitania (western Libya) have crossed the (eastern) Tunisian frontier" and infiltrated west and north of Gabes, athwart an Allied belt at the waist of the French protectorate.

A communique from French general headquarters in North Africa said enemy infiltrations had developed along the whole front in eastern Tunisia.

There was still no official word as to whether Marshal Rommel would seek to consolidate the remnants of his African corps with the fresh Axis regiments hastily ferried to Tunisia, but Allied commanders obviously had that possibility in mind.

Operating in guerilla fashion, French patrols worked far to the rear of Axis advanced positions.

German and Italian communiques declared that Allied strongholds and supply lines were under repeated attacks by U-boats and bombers.

The Germans, with confirmation in Allied quarters, said a German submarine scored three torpedo hits on a warship formation and also torpedoed two freighters and a destroyer in a convoy. The Italians reported their submarines had sunk a "ship of large tonnage" off Philippeville, Algeria.

In Lybia, the British Eighth army's mobile formations wheeled around the shore of the Gulf of Sirte between Agedabia and El Agheila in the effort to complete their job of annihilation of Rommel's men.

North African observers expressed belief that the Germans had established strong defensive positions around Tunis and Bizerte backed up by mine fields.

A Berlin broadcast quoted reports from Tangier as saying that many functionaries of the Italian Fascist organization had been arrested in Casablanca, U. S.-occupied Moroccan port.

The German radio said Pierre Laval, dictator of the Vichy government who advocated a French-German alliance in a speech Friday night, was expected to announce "important decisions" today.

Nazi Fliers Hit 3 Allied Ships

BERLIN (From German broadcasts) — (AP) — The German air force set fire last night to a 7,000-ton merchantship off Allied-held Algiers and damaged a destroyer and a large freighter, the German high command said today.

Its communique reported repeated attacks by German planes on harbors, air bases and coastal areas in French North Africa.

In Libya German forces repulsed fairly strong thrusts by British forces in the region of Agadabia, the communique asserted.

family. Because of his opposition to the Mussolini regime, he voluntarily stepped into the background after the Fascist revolution.

He emerged, however, some months after Mussolini attacked Ethiopia General Emilio de Bono, commander-in-chief of Italian operations at the start of the offensive, failed miserably after initial successes and the Italian expeditionary force faced annihilation when Mussolini approached Badoglio and pleaded with him to save the day.

Badoglio responded, reportedly saying he opposed the aggression but felt duty bound to his king. He cleaned up the Ethiopians in short order, was given the title of the Duke of Addis Ababa and allowed himself to be inducted into the Fascist party.

According to reliable information, Badoglio warned Mussolini when he attacked France that if things went wrong he could not be expected again to take command in the field. There have been numerous reports since Italy entered the war that Badoglio and the royal family were attempting to find some way of negotiating peace and at one time the marshal was said to be planning a "palace revolution" to throw Mussolini out of office.

Gestapo Fortifies Duce's Ports, Report

LONDON—(AP)—The Moscow radio broadcast a Tass dispatch today reporting that German Gestapo agents had arrived at all Italian ports on the Adriatic and were feverishly building coastal fortifications.

The Soviet news agency said the greatest activity was on the heel of the "Italian boot" along Otranto Strait, which connects the Adriatic and the Mediterranean. Traffic in this area, lying opposite Albania, was reported under restriction.

This was among a crop of continental reports of growing apprehension and sagging morale caused in Italy by Allied successes in North Africa.

One account from Turkey said reports received by diplomatic sources told of the dispatch of 60,000 German "tourists"—all men of military age—to Italy in the last three months to bolster Italian morale.

A Balkan source said the Germans were building large fortifications along the Italian-Austrian frontier as a sort of "second line" of defense.

"Italian troops are being rushed to strengthen Sicily's coastal defenses," said another account. "Anti-aircraft guns are being hurried from factories at Turin, Milan and other industrial cities in the north to ward off expected air attacks from Malta and, in the near future, from Tunisia.

"Anti-paratroop exercises are being rehearsed in the interior and a special round-up is being made of persons with 'dangerous thoughts' and who, under stress of invasion, might prove useful to the enemy.

"All small craft have been requisitioned for 'emergencies' which presumably include the possibility of having to evacuate Sicily."

BUNA TOTTERS AS YANKS CLOSE IN ON 3 SIDES

Australians Push Japs Toward Sea at Gona, Send Patrol Into Foe-Held Town.

since the early days of Guadalcanal made a bloody battlefield of the narrow 14-mile strip between Gona and Buna, Allied airmen smashed hard at the most powerful enemy air force reported in New Guinea since August.

Lae and Salamaua have again become major air bases for the foe, it was disclosed, and enemy dive bombers traded blow for blow with Allied medium bombardment units throughout the day.

Results of Allied air operations were 19 enemy planes destroyed in combat or during the constant strafing sweeps against Lae and Salamaua, as well as the sinking of a destroyer attempting to land troops at Buna, by Flying Fortresses.

Although this attempt to reinforce the dwindling Jap garrison at Buna failed, it was apparent that an unestimated number of Japs did manage to get through some time Saturday night or yesterday and new clashes, more fierce in intensity than any previous battles, have raged throughout the area for the last 24 hours.

The enemy flotilla which apparently reinforced beleaguered Buna was hit hard by American bombers braving monsoon weather to attack the relieving convoy. Besides the destroyer, two smaller vessels were sent to the bottom as the Fortresses and B-25's entered the fray.

U. S. Tightens Hold On Southwest Pacific

WASHINGTON—(INS)—American ground troops today continued to tighten their grip on Guadalcanal as U. S. planes and submarines lashed out on the vast Pacific front against Jap supply lines and bases.

Taking advantage of the recent naval-air victory in the Solomons, American forces are striking offensively to disrupt possible Jap preparations to resume their South Pacific counter-drive.

On Guadalcanal, U. S. marines and army forces have been extending their lines east and west of the airfield.

The current U. S. land ofensive on the island was made possible by the defeat of strong Jap armadas in a sea-air battle that cost the enemy 38 ships, sunk and damaged, and prevented enemy reinforcements from landing on the island.

Ferocity of the latest sea-air battle for the southern Solomons was recalled again by the navy's disclosure that another American destroyer was sunk as a result of recent fighting.

The warship was torpedoed in the battle for Guadalcanal, the navy said, and sank while en route to a South Pacific port for repairs. No loss of life was reported, and the officers and crew were picked up by another destroyer.

U. S. Skydragons Hit Japs At Haiphong

CHUNGKING—(AP)—American Skydragons of the China command sank a big Japanese ship—a transport or possibly an aircraft carrier—at Haiphong, French Indo-China, yesterday to cap a series of devastating Allied week-end raids upon the Japanese from Burma in the south to the Yangtze basin in China.

The ship of between 12,000 and 15,000 tons was estroyed in a devastating assault upon the dock and warehouse area of the enemy-occupied port on the Gulf of Tonkin, it was announced at headquarters of Brig. Gen. Claire L. Chennault, commander of the China air task force.

Observers said that the vessel probably was a transport but that it possibly could have been a carrier.

Immense fires were declared to have been left enveloping the Haiphong waterfront, over which supplies are believed flowing inland for a Japanese attack on Yunnan Province, in Southern China, from Indo China.

RAF Bombs Jap Airdromes In Burma

NEW DELHI—(INS)—Japanese airdromes in Burma were attacked Sunday morning and Sunday night by RAF bombers, a communique announced today.

Many bombs were dropped and the smashing missiles were seen to burst on the runways and dispersal areas.

The RAF raids followed operations by United States bombers with British planes in lashing at major cities in Japanese-held Burma. Picked out in these joint raids were Rangoon, Mandalay and Toungoo with thousands of pounds of bombs finding their mark on enemy airdrome runways.

HOROSCOPE

For Tuesday, Nov. 24.

This day may be notable for unique events, mysterious, probably breathtaking and dynamic. Extraordinary adventures and dramatic experiences may rise to high and exciting culminations, both in the business and personal activities. While even humdrum or routine affairs may take on a glamorous hue, yet they should be attacked with energy, common-sense and proper perspective as to their urgency. Visions, intuitions and ideals must be submitted to practical development.

Those whose birthday it is are at the threshold of a year in which conspicuous achievement, success and gratification, in both business and romantic aims and aspirations, may depend upon their individual balance, restrained and properly directed action, with a reasonable perspective maintained in the most bewildering, confused, glamorous and intriguing circumstances. With tact, energy, caution and calmness great things may be attained.

A child born on this day although having exceptional if not extraordinary talents and creative ability, may be the victim of self-defeat should it indulge its erratic, curious or psychic urges.

Choose Sane Presents for Service Men

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Since early September this column has urged friends of men in the Armed Forces to be prompt about mailing Christmas gifts to men overseas. Although the deadline has passed, there is nothing to prevent us from keeping in mind the simple rules that govern the sending of packaged gifts to our boys in service.

The Army and Navy suggests a certain number of don'ts that it's well to remember. Cakes and cookies become stale and reduce to crumbs on the long voyages. Please don't send them. The same is true of fruit, which becomes spoiled. Please don't think you're doing something cute if you slip in a tiny bottle of the lad's favorite cordial or brandy. That won't do at all.

Bear in mind the climate of the country to which he is being sent. If he's going to the tropics, don't send wool-lined slippers or woolen socks or warm underwear. These are welcome in Alaska and Iceland, but are plain nuisances in the tropics.

The boys want things they can really use. A survey just conducted among service men suggests that pipes, tobacco, cigarets, books, waterproof, shockproof watches, pens and pencil sets, and stationery are always welcome. So are windproof cigaret lighters.

Small portable radios, once highly recommended, are bulky to carry around on maneuvers, and there are no facilities for charging dead batteries. When you send cigarets be sure to leave out the matches.

The Army governs the maximum size of presents to be sent overseas. Nothing weighing over 11 pounds or measuring more than 18 inches across will be sent. As already stated, food is debarred.

Snapshots of home, family, sweetheart, neighbors and the family dog are tremendously appreciated and have the merit of being inexpensive.

Letters are always appreciated. Be sure to write often and don't neglect the boy's serial number. Write and address your letters in ink.

REMEMBER THIS

Remember, wringer rolls are rubber and cannot be replaced during the war. Rolls and frame of wringer should be wiped dry after each use. Pressure on rolls should be released when not in use. Avoid "bunching" bulkier pieces or putting too many pieces through the wringer at one time. Otherwise, it puts a strain on the mechanism and increases operating costs.

Rules Given for Wartime Letters

(Wide World Features)

A letter from home can make or break the morale of Uncle Sam's fighting forces, says Mrs. Robert S. Pierle, of the USO national women's committee. Here are some rules she suggests:

Don't write about the war — the service man knows about it.

Don't write about the wonderful party you had last night, or anything else that may make men homesick.

Don't tell the family troubles.

Don't repeat rumors.

Don't write about political controversies and community differences.

Do tell the men about pleasant family events.

Send clippings about people the men are interested in.

Tell about local sports events the men are interested in.

Tell about family achievements —sister Susie has become a USO hostess, and brother Johnny is valedictorian of his class.

Make your letters cheerful, make them short and make them frequent.

COMES CLEAN

Try this on your meat grinder. When stubborn particles of meat and vegetables stick to the inside of the grinder, run a small piece of dry bread through the grinder. The bread acts as a chaser, and saves considerable elbow grease in the dishpan.

Eagles Women Hold Service At Flag Dedication

In their hall, decorated with palms and ferns the Women's Auxiliary to the Fraternal Order of Eagles gathered Sunday for the dedication of the large American flag.

The president, Mrs. Thelma Fisher, gave a short patriotic reading. Readings were also given by Mrs. Josephine Daugherty, vice president, and past president, Mrs. Katherine Heichel. Prayer was given by the chaplain, Mrs. Alice Stutz, and Blue Star flags were presented to mothers of sons in the service. The meeting was brought to a close with the group singing "God Bless America."

Hands Doing War Work Need Extra Care For Beauty

By BETTY CLARKE
(Wide World Beauty Editor)

How about your hands? Now that you're doing a man's work, the easiest way might be to let them go—give up trying to keep them feminine and smooth; pass off their unsightliness by saying "It's just no use." That's where you're wrong.

You won't have to be ashamed of your hands (or feel like sitting on them) when you should be enjoying your furlough date if you take extra care of those ten pretty fingers during your hours on duty at your war-industry job.

Three things are a "must" in your locker — soap, a blustery weather lotion and a nail brush. It's the day-by-day care that counts toward preserving hand beauty. Before you check in at your bench, don't neglect to apply a lotion or cream to your hands. It will be just as effective against the grime and grease as it is against raw winds and chapping. Use the brush to remove any stains that might have settled under your fingernails.

Your weekly manicure is more important than ever, and that's another beauty treatment any girl can do for herself. You've surely learned by now that a war job is no place for long, glamorous fingernails. They just won't stay that way, so that means they must be filed at least once a week. You can keep the cuticle soft and pliable by pushing it back with the towel when you dry your hands and using cuticle oil every time you manicure.

Whether or not to use nail polish is a matter of personal opinion. One sure thing is it takes time and patience to wait for the stuff to dry.

Wentz's Honored On 25th Wedding Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Herman Wentz were guests at a dinner party given in honor of their 25th wedding anniversary, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Stauffer, 303 Newman street, Sunday evening.

Presiding at the table was Miss Lillian Wentz, daughter of the honored guests. The table was decorated with silver candles and two cakes with a miniature bride and groom on each. The centerpiece consisted of chrysanthemums.

Pinochle was played at four tables and prizes were won by Mrs. Wentz, Mrs. Albert Cook, Harry Roberts and A. L. Fisher. The group presented Mr. and Mrs. Wentz with a gift of silver.

Hopkins' Paper Read For Club

"You and Your Family Will Be Mobilized" written by Harry Hopkins was the topic of the paper given by Mrs. A. B. Murphy at the recent meeting of L'Etude club at the home of Mrs. John Grohol, West Fifth street.

After reading Hopkins' article, Mrs. Murphy discussed its significance with club members. Contest prizes were awarded to Mrs. Elmer Gottfried and Mrs. T. R. Cuddy, jr. Guest for the afternoon was Mrs. Hoyt Blayney.

Luncheon was served at two small tables attractively decorated in a Thanksgiving theme with matching favors. Hostess for the next meeting in December will be Mrs. Murphy, East Arch street.

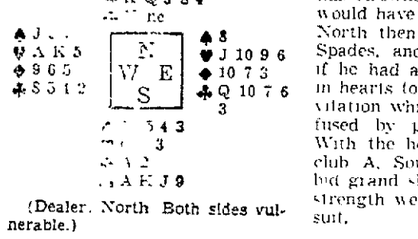
BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By Shepard Barclay

"The Authority on Authorities"

BLACKWOOD PLUS SENSE

Intelligent conventions like the Blackwood method of slam bidding were never meant by their originators to be a substitute for common sense. Rather, they are intended as an aid to it. If your pair is using Blackwood please realize that there are hands on which you should probe for the possibility of a slam by some other method. Most emphatically in this class are some of the deals which favor you with terrific long-suit and short-suit values.



(Dealer, North. Both sides vulnerable.)

North	East	South	West
1. 1 ♠	Pass	3 ♠	Pass
4 NT	Pass	5 ♥	Pass
2. 1 ♠	Pass	3 ♠	Pass

How much better the second bidding is on this deal! The first table bidding is what actually occurred in a rubber game. As soon as North heard about his partner's strong support for spades he properly became slam-minded But see what he did about it. By force of habit, he used his Blackwood 4-No Trumps to ask South how many aces he had.

After South answered with 5-Hearts to show two aces, poor North was in a quandary, indeed. He didn't know which two aces South held. If hearts and diamonds, even a grand slam might be in the cards. But if South had the two minor aces, there might not even be a small slam. Taking a chance, North bid 6-Spades, and was down two tricks when East led the heart J.

After South's 3-Spades, North should have invited slam by bidding his blank club suit—a particularly enlightening bid if you are using Blackwood, as it betokens extreme distribution and asks your partner what aces he has elsewhere. South in this case would have shown his diamond A. North then should sign off at 4-Spades, and put it up to South if he had a second-round stopper in hearts to bid small slam, an invitation which he would have refused by passing the 4-Spades. With the heart A instead of the club A, South should have then bid grand slam, if his main other strength were outside of the club suit.

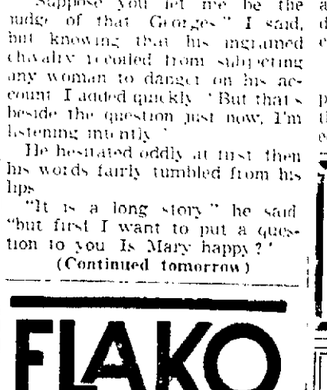
Tomorrow's Problem.



(Dealer, East. East-West vulnerable.)

How should North play this deal at 3-No Trumps after East leads the spade J?

"Pitfalls of Love"

(A Sequel to Marriage Meddlers)

By ADELE GARRISON

I knew what I must and must not do in dealing with this sudden emotional outburst of Georges. I must not expostulate. I must be careful to say nothing which could wound the pride of the stricken man before me.

Indeed, I knew that any words would be worse than useless so I simply returned the pressure of his clasped hands and waited until the paroxysm of sobs should end.

For a scant two minutes the dreary sounds went on, then Georges loosened his clasp on my hands and fumbled in his coat for a handkerchief, which he jabbed against his eyes, as he said:

"I am so ashamed of this exhibition, Aunt Madge! I crave your forgiveness. I do not understand why I should give way like this, for I have always been able to control myself. Today I have behaved like a baby."

"Not like a baby, Georges," I said, looking steadily at him, "but like a strong man who finds sanctuary after torture."

"I know," he said, "but as a boy I was taught that it was a shameful thing to weep. I was flogged when I did, even if I had real cause for tears."

I winced at this glimpse at the Spartan training of youthful royalty, and his eyes showed almost mirthful comprehension. He kissed my hands tenderly, showing another phase of his courtly training, then rose to his feet.

"You are just as you used to be, Aunt Madge," he said. "I used to tell Mary that I always felt taller when I talked to you."

I flushed with pleasure at this tribute for such I knew Georges meant it to be but spoke calmly.

"Thank you, Georges," I said. "I see you haven't forgotten how to pay a pretty compliment. Now tell me what you wish me to do."

"Principally to listen," he said earnestly, as he sat down, "then to advise me. To aid me in any way would be too dangerous."

"Suppose you let me be the judge of that, Georges," I said, but knowing that his ingrained chivalry revolted from subjecting any woman to danger on his account I added quickly, "But that's beside the question just now. I'm listening intently."

He hesitated oddly at first then his words fairly tumbled from his lips.

"It is a long story," he said "but first I want to put a question to you. Is Mary happy?"

FILMSTRUCK

By Sheilah Graham

(Copyright, 1942.)

CHAPTER XIII

She opened a drawer in a gilt writing bureau and handed him their contract.

"You don't seem to have read it very thoroughly," she said and pointed to a paragraph in which she had to approve the film before release.

"I guess I'm as bad a business man as I am a picture producer, Bruce said slowly. He moved to the door. He would have gone, but Countess Saskia said hurriedly:

"I didn't mean that about the picture. It just needs some retakes, then we'll release it . . . Don't look at me like that," she tried to make him sit down. He rolled a cigaret, slowly puffed it, and left her standing in the middle of the room. For the first time since his college days, Bruce went to a bar with the deliberate intention of getting drunk.

It was dark when Livia and Charles drove up the circular driveway to his Colonial-fronted house.

There were several telephone messages for Fordyce—reporters from the trade papers had been calling all day to get confirmation of his resignation from the studio. Fordyce smiled. There were no secrets in Hollywood.

The white-coated Filipino servant conducted Livia up the thin spiral staircase and into Charles' bedroom. She sat down before a large mirror over a mahogany chest of drawers, pulled off her hat and loosened her hair. She was tired.

She powdered her nose and put on "new" lips. Then she studied the pictures of two beautiful women whose faces smiled challengingly from the dressing-table top. "To Charles—I shall love you forever—Bernice" was the inscription on one. Livia wondered whether Bernice was one of the wives or merely a passing infatuation.

The other portrait was of a young girl. "She can't be more than sixteen," thought Livia. There was no inscription on this.

There was another portrait by his low, wide bed. This woman was much older than the others and like the young girl.

"One of his wives," concluded Livia. And, of course, she was the mother of the girl. How strange it would be to be the stepmother of a girl who was only a few years younger. Livia had decided to accept Charles as a husband.

The adjoining bathroom was almost as big as the bedroom. It was green and cool, with silvered racks and taps. A silk dressing gown lay across a white leather armchair. She felt closer to Charles than at any time since they had known each other.

She went downstairs and found him in an oak-beamed room which had a long bar on one side, and a brass rail. The Filipino brought in a tray of fried shrimps. They were hot and delicious. Livia drank from the long tumbler containing rum, and "a few other things" Charles told her. She sat on a high stool facing him and felt sophisticated until the liquor caught at her throat and she coughed. He took the tumbler from her.

"I'll weaken it," he said. She liked him for that. Fordyce was surprised himself. But he didn't make them drunk. That wasn't his way. The last time a girl had insisted on getting drunk he had her driven home by his chauffeur—greatly to her surprise.

They had dinner by the candlelight in a dining-room of shadowy wood and gleaming silver. The Filipino was assisted by a twin, and the service was noiseless and swift. Later they returned to the room with the bar and were sitting on a wide red leather sofa.

Charles held her close and kissed her hair.

"I'm crazy about you," he whispered, "Do you love me—a little?"

"Yes, I do—a little," she said—and waited for him to say, "Will you marry me?" He kissed her again, passionately and possessively. Charles was unprepared for her sudden withdrawal.

"What's wrong?" he asked without getting up. There was nothing wrong.

"I'm a fool," she said. Her voice was hard.

"Livia!" his voice was gentle.

"I thought you were in love with me," she laughed.

"But I am," he protested. She really was sweet and her eyes were beautiful with tears. "Do you want me to marry you? Is that it?" he asked in a matter of fact voice. She was embarrassed.

"No," she answered hurriedly, "No, not that at all."

"Will you marry me?" he asked her. She paused, then said:

"Yes, yes, I will."

After his last divorce, Fordyce had sworn off marriage. No woman would possess him again. Now he was asking a girl, barely older than his daughter, to be Mrs. Charles Fordyce, number five. And he was the cynic who had coined the phrase, "The husband who marries again doesn't deserve to lose the first wife."

All right, he would marry again—probably make another fool of himself.

"Stay here tonight," he whispered, his lips close to hers. She thought of the loneliness in her apartment and almost said, "Yes." He saw her hesitation.

"We're going to be married. What difference does it make?" he persisted.

"None—I suppose," she said slowly.

"You won't be sorry—I swear it." He kissed her again. She stood up.

"You don't really love me, do you?" said Charles watching her closely.

"Oh, but I do," she protested, "Only—"

"Only you'd like for us to be married first?"

"Yes. Is it prudish of me? But there hasn't been any other man—I mean, I was in love with someone—but—"

"I'll hire a 'plane tonight, and we'll fly to Las Vegas and get married." Now she was very agitated.

"Not tonight—I've—I've got to get ready, and things," she ended lamely. "There are so many things to do."

"Like what?" Her brain refused the answer. "All right, darling," he said suddenly, "All right. We'll go tomorrow night, all right?"

"Yes."

"And now I'll take you home."

"Please."

He kissed her gently at the door of her apartment, and she was glad when he left her there. She was still confused, but before he reached his car, she called him back. He came swiftly to her.

"Do I give up my career?" she smiled faintly.

"Not at all," he assured her. "We'll be a family company—star and director."

"Yes," she said eagerly and brushed his cheek with her soft lips, "Good night, Charles." Livia waved while the car went slowly away.

The following day had the unreal quality of a dream. She was awakened at 9 o'clock when an enormous box of flowers arrived. There were roses, daffodils, narcissuses, iris, gladioli, jonquils. Iceland poppies—all the flowers of California. And a large spray of white orchids.

Charles was calling for her at 11. They were to go shopping. There was much to do.

"I must tell Bruce," Livia thought suddenly. She wondered at the sudden depression dampening her excitement.

She called him. There was no answer. If she rushed, she could see Vera and get back in time for Charles.

"I'm eloping with Charles Fordyce tonight," she told her astonished married sister.

"I'm glad, darling—" Vera kissed her. She had wanted Livia to marry Bruce. But she liked Fordyce.

"What shall I do about father? Shall I tell him?" Livia asked.

"No," Vera said quickly. "Why should you? You'll probably never see our miserable parent again. And why should you risk security and happiness for a man who has done absolutely nothing for you? I'll take the responsibility if anything ever happens."

George, Vera's husband, came back then. Now he was in real trouble. The men for whom he worked on the race tracks had used him as a figurehead for certain transactions. The police were interested in his present movements.

"We're going to Mexico," he told Vera.

"When?" she asked bravely.

"Within a week."

"Please don't go," Livia begged. And unexpectedly, she wept. "I'd feel so alone without you."

"But you'll have your husband," Vera reminded her gently.

"Yes, of course. I'll have Charles."

Livia's glow of excitement had all but died when Charles called at her apartment. He had a carnation in his lapel and looked young and jaunty.

"It's fun getting married," he laughed. "Let's get married once a year—but to each other. And now, Cinderella, step into the pumpkin—we're going places."

Charles was one of those men who actually enjoy shopping. He directed his chauffeur to a jewelry shop on Wilshire boulevard.

"You must have an engagement ring," he said solemnly. "All my wives have had an engagement ring."

Sport Podge

by REX HESS

The Massillon bubble has busted. The reign of terror is ended. They are now the Massillon Mites instead of the Mighty Men of Massillon.

All these things and more the sports scribes of Ohio and the nation were saying yesterday after Canton McKinley's 35-0 victory over the world's most famous high school football team.

It was Canton's first victory over Massillon since 1937, and they had to go all the way back to 1907 to find a bigger Canton score over the Tigers. It was 44-0 that year.

It's nice to be sitting on both sides of the fence when an upset comes along.

After Mansfield had been licked by Massillon and swamped by McKinley, members of the Mansfield team were quoted in this space as saying the Bulldogs were not as tough as the Tigers.

But last week I fortunately jumped over on the other side of the fence and reported Mansfielders feared the Tigers were due for a licking.

And I still think the reason for that fear—injuries to Graber and Cardinal—had much to do with that licking. Both played, but they weren't up to par. And the Massillon subs aren't to be rated with the Tiger first team. Massillon found itself short of manpower this season.

A feeble six-yard punt by Pellegrini, sub for Graber, gave Canton its first break of the game Saturday, and that break was all the Bulldogs needed to take the upper hand. From then on, Massillon wasn't in the ball game.

Can Massillon take it when the Tigers are finally defeated? That question has been asked often in the past few years as the Tigers rolled up their long string of 52 games without a defeat.

Maybe it was answered Saturday. There were fights all over Massillon's jammed stadium seating 22,000 fans. There were fights downtown after the game, and even out on the Canton road as the Bulldogs went home.

Of course you have to be sitting in at the beginning of each and every fight to find out who started it and whose fault it was.

But it's a good safe bet that the disappointed Massillon rooters were in no mood to take the jeering taunts which the Canton contingent undoubtedly dished out.

With practically all of the under-class members of the Massillon team eligible for the draft next fall it looks like the Tiger reign at the top of the high school football heap is definitely ended for the time being.

Which means that if Massillon beats Mansfield next fall, there will be no talk of a moral victory from this quarter.

Blackhawks Want It Clean

Tell Hockey League They'll Be Good Boys.

By H. C. WARREN

CHICAGO—(INS)—Paul Thompson, manager of the Chicago Blackhawks of the National Hockey league, today served notice that the other loop teams can dispense with the "penalty box" in games involving the Chicago team.

The Blackhawks have adopted a "Keep It Clean" policy for the 1942-43 season according to Manager Thompson. Thus such ungentlemanly gestures as body checking tripping and "sassing" the officials will not be included in the Blackhawks' repertoire of play.

Listen to Manager Thompson:

"The day of the body-checking defenseman has gone. There is no place for such rowdyism, in hockey. A great player like Taffy Abel would not be welcome on my team today because of his style, which called for skating over an opponent instead of around him.

"For my money, you can also have such devotees of roughhouse hockey as Pat Egan, Jimmy Orlando and "Red" Goupilles. They're completely out of the Blackhawks' scheme of things.

Thompson has adopted the St Louis Cardinals, world series champions, as a pattern for his team. He continued.

"How did the St. Louis Cardinals defeat the New York Yankees in the World Series? They just went out and took the play away from those Yankees just as they did against the Brooklyn Dodgers, the New York Yanks and the Cincinnati Reds.

'Did the Cardinals stand around and wait for somebody to hit them? Absolutely not. They ignored any tough housing and carried on with a type of speed that the National and the American leagues hadn't seen for some years. That's the way the Blackhawks will win games this winter—speed."

The Blackhawks, like every other team in the Hockey League, have lost a lot of good players to the armed forces of the United States and Canada. Thompson has lost Joe Cooper and Art Weihe from his defense line and Goalie Sammy Lo Presti.

* * *

However Thompson will be able to place several good combinations on the ice with the talent he has rounded up along with veterans from last year. These combinations would include: Goalie Bert Gardiner, Bill Carse, "Red" Hammill, Max, Doug and Reg Bentley, "Mush" March, Cully Dahlstrom, George Allen, Phil Hergesheimer, Seibert Joe Matte, "Red" Mitchell and Leo Carbol.

MISTAH DAVID HAWKINS DIES IN CLEVELAND

CLEVELAND —(INS)— Veteran fight manager and humorous sports writer, David Hawkins, 44-year-old Birmingham, Ala., negro, was dead today after a long siege of tuberculosis.

Hawkins' best managing job was done with Wilson Yarbo, who once had Mickey Walker on the floor for an eight count in a non-title light heavyweight bout. He contributed articles to several newspapers, wrote a sports column for the Cleveland Call-Post, negro weekly, and was generally credited with bringing the great negro baseball pitcher, Satchel Paige, to prominence.

* * *

His writings appeared in the New York Mirror New York News and virtually every negro newspaper in the country.

Brown's Theory Pays Off

Well Trained Team and Precision Win Title.

By JOHN COLBURN

COLUMBUS—(AP)—A new theory of football brought to Ohio State by Paul Brown, former high school coach, today makes the Bucks Western conference champions and topnotchers nationally.

H. O. "Fritz" Crisler, Michigan mentor and veteran of 20 years in the collegiate coaching field, saw his powerful Wolverines bow to Ohio 21 to 7 Saturday, then paid this tribute to the Scarlet and Gray gridders:

"They're great. They have speed and talent and they're beautifully coached, yes, beautifully coached."

From the wily Crisler this was a great compliment to Brown's theory of football—that a perfectly conditioned team able to execute plays with speed and precision can be beaten only by a vastly superior eleven.

"Precision Paul," as Brown is known in this football hotbed, also stresses teamwork, rather than individual performance. Saturday's championship triumph over Michigan, he said, was a team victory.

It also was an exhibition of diversified offense. When Ohio's famed ground attack was stopped by a great Michigan line, the Bucks struck through the air eight times with a slippery ball. Six passes were complete.

Three passes went for touchdowns. Each was designed in advance as a scoring play. Their success was the result of precision execution.

Brown came to the Big Ten in 1941 and last year his team lost only to Northwestern and tied a superior Michigan team.

This year, Ohio bowed to Wisconsin, 17 to 7—"They played 110 per cent ball that day and we were only going 90 per cent," said Brown—and has won eight games. Saturday the Bucks tackle Lieut.-Col. Bernie Bierman's Iowa Seahawks here.

* * *

Brown came to Ohio State from Massillon high school, which he piloted to scholastic gridiron greatness. But while he was winning his first "big time" championship Saturday, Massillon lost its first football game in 53 contests extending back to 1937.

Michigan Saturday wasn't the perfectly functioning team that beat Notre Dame 32 to 20 the week before, but the alert Bucks so applied their speed that they gave the Wolverines hardly a chance.

The Ohio win gave the Bucks their fifth conference championship and the second since 1939. In 1935, they shared the title. It also was their first win over Michigan since 1937.

Charles Csuri of Cleveland, Ohio's all-America tackle candidate, gave Ohio the break it needed for the first score by blocking a punt.

"Everyone was superb, just superb," said Brown.

"George Lynn's thinking and blocking stand out in my mind as a feature of the game. Bob Shaw did a great job. Paul Sarringhaus was plain swell. Gene Fekete and Csuri were sound and solid. Lin Houston was tough to lick. Les Horvath played another great game and Bill Vickroy turned in another of his best. It was a team victory."

Sarringhaus Shaw and Horvath made the touchdowns on passes and Fekete place-kicked the extra points.

Georgia-Georgia Tech, Army-Navy Top Grid Schedule

Preston West, Georgia Tech tackle

Bob Kennedy, Wash. State back

Coach Crowley

Bruce Alford, T. C. U. end

Frankie Sinkwich, Georgia back

Clash between the two great southern leaders, Georgia and Georgia Tech, at Atlanta, the traditional game between Army and Navy and several important conference games highlight the final big football Saturday of the season, Nov. 28. The Army-Navy game will be played at Annapolis where only a small crowd can be accommodated. Other important games bring together Boston College and Holy Cross, Fordham against ex-Fordham Coach Jimmy Crowley's North Carolina Pre-Flight team; Michigan and Iowa, Ohio State and Iowa Navy, Southern California and Notre Dame, Southern Methodist and Texas Christian, Vanderbilt and Tennessee, Washington and Washington State and Indiana and Fort Knox.

Parker Hall Paces Rams To Victory

CLEVELAND —(INS)— Back in Cleveland to condition for their final National Professional Football League game against the Bears in Chicago next Sunday, the Cleveland Rams today credited Parker Hall and a smashing ground attack for a 14-7 win over the Wichita Aero Commandos.

* * *

Hall turned the trick with the game only two minutes old when he whipped a pass 20 yards to Dante Magnani who galloped 35 yards for the score. Chet Adams converted.

The Rams' second score, in an exhibition game at Wichita, came on an 80-yard drive, Geoge Morris scoring the touchdown and Dutch Elston kicking the extra point.

Herb Schlotthauer raced 70 yards in the third period for the Commandos' score, Floyd Wheeler converting.

Sport Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, Jr.

NEW YORK—(AP)—Adding to utter confusion: Some names mentioned in recent sports items have been Gil Godds, the runner; Glenn Dobbs, the Tulsa U. passtosser, Bobby Dodd, acting coach, and Bobby Dodd, halfback, at Georgia Tech; Bobby Dobbs, Glenn's brother, also a Tulsa back—and, of course, the Dod gers. . . . When Bummy Davis whacked Red Doty at Boston Friday night, a group of WAACs were ringside guests of the fight club . . . which shows how careful you have to be about spelling these days.

HE FORGOT TO DUCK.

When Dick (Fantalk) Hawkins, the AP sports scribe, Jack Troy of the Atlanta Constitution and John Martin went duck hunting last week the weather wasn't right and ducks were scarce. . . . After a long day, Martin was pretty discouraged. He hadn't shot a duck or even fired his gun. . . . As the nimrods headed for home, Troy consoled him: "Don't fret, John; it's character building."

Grid Season Nearing End

Many League Titles Still To Be Decided.

By AUSTIN BEALMEAR

NEW YORK—(AP)—With the Big Ten championship tucked away by Ohio State and the Georgia Bulldogs tucked away by Auburn, this dizzy football season wobbles toward the close this week but whatever happens will be strictly anti-climactic.

Conference championships still are to be decided in many of the major loops, however.

In spite of what happened last Saturday, a lot of folks are going to be more than slightly interested in the southern headliner between unbeaten, untied Georgia Tech and a Georgia team that had its dreams of a perfect season and a Rose Bowl bid turned into a 27-13 nightmare by Auburn.

* * *

The two teams meet at Athens Saturday and Georgia Tech, winner of eight straight games, could wrap up the Southeastern conference title as well as a bowl engagement by winning.

Tennessee meets Vanderbilt in another Southeastern conference game while Alabama tackles George Pre-Flight.

The Thanksgiving day card finds Tulane engaging L.S.U., and South Carolina meeting Wake Forest.

The season ended for the Big Ten last week, so far as championships are concerned, when Ohio State toppled Michigan, 21-7, but one loop tilt remains to be played this week and other teams have dates with service clubs. Michigan and Iowa ring down the conference curtain Saturday.

* * *

At the same time Ohio State will tangle with the Iowa Pre-Flighters, Indiana will meet Fort Knox and Illinois will play Camp Grant. Northwestern plays Great Lakes Naval Thursday and Notre Dame journeys to Southern California for their annual intersectional joust Saturday. Wisconsin's 20-6 triumph over Minnesota Saturday was the finale for both clubs.

Ohio Colleges Wind Up Season

COLUMBUS—(AP)—Ohio wraps up its 1942 gridiron season this week with Cincinnati's Bearcats needing only a win over weak Miami to become the only unbeaten or untied team in all-state competition.

Cincinnati has lost only two games, one to Georgia the other to Tennessee. Ohio Northern, the Ohio conference champion, lost its only game to Albion of Michigan, but was tied by Wittenberg.

The Cincinnati-Miami clash is one of five Thanksgiving day tilts. Other games that day are: Ohio U. at Dayton, John Carroll at Akron, Case at Western Reserve, and Wilberforce at West Virginia state.

Ohio State winds up collegiate football play for the state with its Saturday game against the Iowa Seahawks here.

In Saturday's games, Ohio Wesleyan upset an overconfident Western Reserve 13 to 12 and Denison beat Wittenberg 24 to 6 in the final Ohio conference game. Other scores: Ohio State 21, Michigan 7, Cincinnati 9, Xavier 0; Wooster 24, Wright-Patterson 13; Oberlin 26, Earlham 13; Bowling Green 19, Grosse Ile Navy 7; Fort Knox 7, Youngstown 0.

FIGHTS BREAK OUT AS CANTON BEATS TIGERS

MASSILLON — (INS) — After waiting for seven years the Canton Bulldogs finally trounced the Massillon Tigers 35-0 Saturday, and the celebration by Canton rooters afterward split the welkin and disrupted traffic on the Canton-Massillon highway to an extent that still had sports fans talking today.

The rooters from bulldog town incurred fights all over the Tiger stadium and playing field immediately after the upset by their celebration antics which included a thwarted attempt to uproot Massillon's steel goal posts.

Hutson Sets New Record

Catches 71 Passes With Two Games Yet to Play.

By LAWTON CARVER

NEW YORK—(INS)—In the National Professional Football league all men are almost equal. The range of ability among the regulars is from excellent to superlative. An ordinary player in college doesn't even get a chance to gather splinters on the pro benches. You've almost got to be an all-America to carry the water bucket in the pro league.

Hence the acclaim that goes to Don Hutson.

The big No. 14 that the comparatively small Green Bay Packer end wears on his jersey is watched with eagerness by the fans throughout the National league circuit, because of his peculiar ability to catch a football thrown by somebody else—usually Cecil Isbell.

Hutson catches a football like a baseball player taking fliers in the outfield. There is no waste motion, no scuffling and fumbling and rushing. He seems to be where the ball is thrown and if it is a little wide or low or high he merely reaches out and grabs it with an ease that makes the efforts of the other pass-catchers seem puny and clumsy.

He is the greatest pass-catcher in the history of football. Isbell is one of the greatest pass-throwers, but somehow, the way Hutson does it you figure that he doesn't need an Isbell or a Sammy Baugh or a Tuffy Leemans to hurl the ball. Just any passer would do.

Hutson caught 14 passes yesterday afternoon when the Packers played to a 21-21 tie with the Giants. This gave him a total of 71 for the season, or two better than his previous record, and he still has two games to go. His record for yardage was raised to 1,166. His two touchdowns made a new league mark of 16 with 14 points for the day he continued as scoring pacestarter.

Pep Impresses Ring Experts

Wins Feather Crown First Time In Garden.

By JACK CUDDY

NEW YORK—(UP)—Lammer's lane—a back alley of sports inhabited by cynical, hard-bitten characters—is reluctantly enthusiastic over Friday night's big fight at the Garden and over Willie Pep, who emerged as the new featherweight king.

* * *

It often requires years for a boxer to evoke general admiration from the salty men on Jacob's Jetty, where you'll still find a few who deprecate the prowess of Joe Louis, for example. But already the majority of cauliflower connoisseurs have respect, at least, for the young Italian from Hartford who decisively defeated Veteran Chalky Wright.

* * *

Victory, in itself, is an important factor with any jury on punch prado because it carries the payoff of bets and entitles the winner to a larger cut of the gate the next time out. But to command respect on 49th street, victory must be achieved with finesse—particularly in championship competition. Fugau- eagk - Su , fwy y app never before had fought in a Garden main event, he won with finesse against the Veteran Los Angeles negro, who had far greater experience in more than 300 battles and who packed a much more explosive punch. Wright is old, unquestionably older than the 30 years he professes, but his age had little bearing on Friday night's outcome, because at no time was Chalky even blowing. Pep, fighting his first 15-round bout, was more fatigued in the final session than ancient Wright.

The Hartford kid became new champion (New York brand) because of his speed, boxing skill and ring strategy. This strategy was mapped while Willie was training for the brawl—mapped by his shrewd manager, Lou Viscuisl, and by his talented trainer, Bill Gore. He was not to wage his usual type of fight.

He was to stab and fade away, stab and fade away—keeping the bobbing champion constantly off balance. He was to evade being trapped on the ropes or in corners. At close quarters he was to tie his man up, rather than risk exchanges with the hard-punching, rugged negro.

Viscuisl and Gore were confident that Willie could out-point Wright if he would follow instructions—if he didn't lose his head because of the roar of the crowd or when tagged. It was a lot to ask of a young kid—to become a hit and run artist. Particularly of a kid whose aggressive style had clicked off 53 straight victories, 19 by knockouts—and who knew that the whole state of Connecticut was behind him and that 6,000 of his home-state admirers would be watching him in the thundering garden.

Almost as surprising as Pep's ringcraft under fire, was the huge crowd and gate, attracted by two out-of-town featherweights. The crowd of 19,521—biggest fight gathering any place in America in 1942—paid $71,868, a new record for feather title fights anywhere.

Now you can understand why the cynics along bashed-beak boulevard have respect for Willie Pep.

CLEVELAND BARONS SKID TO CELLAR

PROVIDENCE, R. I. — (INS) — Cleveland's skidding hockey Barons were tied for last place with the Pittsburgh Hornets today in the American hockey league after dropping their game with the Providence Reds, 2-1, last night within the last 90 seconds of play.

Tommy Burlington put Cleveland ahead after 17 minutes of the second period, but Providence bounced back in two minutes and tied it up with Oscar Aubuchon's goal shot from Bob Whitelaw's rebound. The final tally was registered by Jack Toupin with seconds left to play in the final period.

Kessing of the North Carolina Naval Pre-Flight school said yesterday that the football game between the Pre-Flight Cloudbusters and the Iowa Naval Pre-Flight school, scheduled for Chapel Hill December 12, had been cancelled because of transportation difficulties.

HEAR REVIEWS OF 3 BOOKS AT GALION MEET

17 Business and Professional Women's Clubs Send Delegates to Session.

GALION — Reviewing three timely books, Mrs. DePew Head, Columbus lecturer, addressed over 100 members of the Business and Professional Women's club representing 17 cities of Ohio when the Galion chapter was host for the Fifth district convention at Hotel Talbott Sunday. Bertha Chacopulos, district director and Galion president, presided for the morning and afternoon sessions.

Mrs. Head reviewed first "Alaska Under Arms" by Jean Potter, "Miracle on the Congo," by Ben Lucian Berman, and "A Time for Greatness" by Herbert Agar.

The first book, Mrs. Head pointed out, shows the lack of foresight on the part of the United States relations with Alaska, while the "Miracle on the Congo" portrayed the story of the Free French in that territory. Herbert Agar's book contains a valuable examination of America and democracy, the reviewer said. Quoting from the author Mrs. Head said, "This is a time for greatness if we have the moral courage to see and meet the challenge of civilization."

Conducting the registration held at the Masonic Temple, in the morning were Daisy Berry, Anna Moore, Florence Durtschi, Mary K Horn, Aliene Arndt, and Bertha Coldwell Devotionals were led by Mildred Wagner and Adeline Wright of Bellville.

State officers who spoke were Jeannette Hayes of Columbus, executive secretary; Christine Van Gorden, of Cleveland, membership chairman; Louise Schroeder, treasurer, and Minnie Laudon of Mansfield, scholarship chairman. Presidents of the clubs within the district also gave reports of war activities in their own clubs.

Olive Huston, state president from Xenia, was principal speaker during the morning session which was held at the Masonic Temple. She spoke on the topic "Strengthening the Federation for Victory."

Rev. Philip Auer, pastor of the Peace Lutheran church, gave the devotional message at the afternoon session. Freda Loyer, of New Washington, then sang three vocal numbers. Introducing the afternoon program was Gertrude Mann, program chairman.

Winner of the attendance prize, a corsage of defense stamps, was the Wooster delegation. Plans for the day's activities were in charge of Gertrude Mann, Berthe Chacopulos, Arvilla Emmenegger, Mrs. Kenneth Petrie, Martha Albrecht and Edna Smith.

San Francisco in the days when boxing matches were outlawed but well attended furnishes the colorful background for the Ohio attraction, "Gentleman Jim," film story of the life of James J. Corbett's spectacular career is traced in the picture from the time he crashes an exclusive club and is signed for an exhibition bout to the sports classic in New Orleans in 1892 when he won the world's championship from John L. Sullivan. Ward Bond has the role of Sullivan and other leads are played by Alexis Smith, Alan Hale and John Loder. Raoul Walsh directed.

Stage Band.

Tony Pastor's band that played seven months at the Hotel Lincoln in New York takes over the stage for four performances at the Madison theater today. With Artie Shaw before he organized his own orchestra in 1939, Pastor plays many original Shaw arrangements although his style is completely "pastorized." The maestro's vocalizing has been heard on Columbia Brunswick and Bluebird discs and the orchestra has made numerous recordings for the Bluebird platters. Started on his career by his admiration for Jimmy Dorsey, Pastor has built his orchestra to include several entertainers among them Johnny "Paradiddle Joe" Morris, Stubby Pastor and Eugenie Baird.

Romantic Story.

Barbara Stanwyck plays the imperious head of a famous family reduced to three sisters in the Ritz attraction, "The Gay Sisters," featuring Geraldine Fitzgerald, Nancy Coleman and George Brent. As Fiona Gaylord Miss Stanwyck involves herself in intrigue when she tricks a civil engineer into marrying her in order to be eligible to inherit a fortune. Gene Lockhart and Donald Crisp are in the cast. Wallace Ford carries the lead in "Inside the Law," the co-feature.

Russian Front.

The speed and force of modern fighting machines engaged in battle as well as the fanatical fury with which the Red Russian Army drove back the Nazi invaders in last winter's counter-offensive are pictured in "Moscow Strikes Back," the Park headliner. Edward G. Robinson delivers the stirring commentary that accompanies the picture which was filmed by cameramen of the Soviet film industry. Lupe Velez is featured in another Mexican spitfire story, this one, "Mexican Spitfire Sees a Ghost," showing as the second attraction.

Selectee Becomes Hero Even Before He Goes to War

CLEVELAND—(INS)—Most men who are tagged "heroes" today wear an army uniform, but William Blackburn began his role as a hero the day before he donned his khaki outfit.

Spending his last night at his home before being inducted into the army, Blackburn heard a girl scream in front of his house. He investigated and found Helen Ocheltree, 20, lying on the sidewalk and a man, clutching a purse, fleeing from the scene.

The 32-year-old selectee gave chase for 10 blocks and finally caught the man, knocked him down, and sat on him until police arrived. The purse contained one dollar.

Said Blackburn, "anyone would have done what I did. I guess I was just getting in a little pre-Jap chasing training."

STOCK MARKET TAKES SLIGHT DOWNWARD DIP

Scrap Metal Situation in Steel Industry Eased, 1943 Squeeze Seen.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK—The general direction was slightly downward in today's early stock market transactions.

Fractionally lower at a quiet opening were American Telephone, Chrysler, General Motors, Anaconda, Kennecott, Western Union, and U. S. Steel. Small plus marks were posted for Sears Roebuck, Goodrich, United Aircraft and Johns-Manville.

Holders of steels were comforted by the survey of the magazine "Steel" which said that the scrap situation in this industry had eased considerably.

The review indicated that the next scrap squeeze probably would come in the first 1943 quarter unless the flow of dormant material continues.

TWO-PRONGED RED ASSAULT CRUSHES NAZIS

Russians Inflicting Heavy Casualties on Foe on Two Sides of Stalingrad.

a fortified point and captured much war material.

South of Voronezh, 300 miles northwest of Stalingrad, Italian troops attempted to force a wedge into Soviet positions but the effort was frustrated.

(The DNB announcement on the new Soviet offensive said that the drives on both sides of Stalingrad were made "with the ultimate aim of pinning down the German forces on the eastern front before winter really starts."

It was admitted that in fighting of "unabated fury" the Soviets succeeded in driving wedges into the German lines in a campaign to chop off German defense positions on the flanks of these wedges.

"British and American tanks appeared for the first time in this sector," DNB said.

("Timoschenko yesterday continued to attack on a grand scale, hurling in armored units and ruthlessly flinging in one infantry division after another. Single Russian tanks forged ahead and penetrated behind German and Rumanian lines where they attempted to destroy supply lines. A large number of them were destroyed by Axis planes.

("South of Stalingrad conditions were the same. The Russians were unable to break the concentrated defense of the Luftwaffe and German armor-piercing weapons and on the evening of the third day of this battle for Stalingrad the Russians had not attained their ambitious aims.")

The capture of two rail towns, Krivo Muzginskaya, 10 miles southeast of Kalach which lies 40 miles northwest of Stalingrad, and Abganerovo, 32 miles southwest of the Volga industrial city, cut the Nazi forces east of the Don bend off from all rail communication.

A Soviet high command communique said that Russian forces were pressing steadily forward, breaking all German resistance as they advanced.

On the northwest sector, where 16 Nazi infantry and armored divisions were routed or torn to shreds at the start of the offensive, two additional regiments have been routed and numerous prisoners taken, the high command said at midnight.

Thirty German blockhouses were destroyed along with 18 tanks and 12 guns, it was announced.

The communique said that on another sector of the northwest front another 1,000 of the enemy had been killed while the initial special announcement on the offensive said that 14,000 Nazis had been killed and 13,000 taken prisoner. Some 360 German guns were captured in three days of battling, it was said.

Six enemy infantry divisions and one tank division were routed and seven other infantry divisions and two tank divisions sustained heavy losses, the Soviets said.

The offensive northwest of Stalingrad was opened on a 20-mile front in the vicinity of Serafimovich, 100 miles northwest of Stalingrad, from which the Russians drove south. The attack south of Stalingrad was launched over a 15-mile front.

Northeast of the Black sea naval base of Tuapse, the communique said, there was fighting only of local importance. One Nazi battalion attacked Soviet positions but was repelled.

Report Nazis Fortify Streets of Oslo

STOCKHOLM—(UP)—Newspaper reports from Oslo said that the Germans were erecting barricades and pillboxes in the Oslo streets and hastily preparing new fortifications along the Norwegian coast.

The newspaper Social Demokraten reported from Oslo that 50 concrete and steel bunkers had been thrown up by the Nazis in Oslo at strategic locations to meet possible street fighting.

All along the Norwegian coast, it was reported, the Germans were desplaying great nervousness and were building new fortifications.

The Tidningen said from Oslo that mass arrests of peasants were reported in an effort by police to find saboteurs of Norwegian agricultural production.

All Jewish property in Norway was said to have been confiscated.

Army Postpone Making Of Two Awards To Save Metal.

WASHINGTON—(AP)— To save metal, the war department today put off indefinitely the manufacture of two newly-authorized medals.

They are the American defense service medal to be worn by military personnel who served between Sept. 8, 1939, and Pearl Harbor, and the Army of Occupation of Germany medal for service in occupied areas between the World War armistice and July 11, 1923.

for nation-wide gasoline rationing. Truman said the committee will seek to determine the advisability and necessity for the Office of Defense Transportation orders as they relate to the entire war effort. Members of both senate and house have demanded a delay in the rationing program, with a house committee today secretly hearing high army and navy officials.

Meanwhile, Mansfield grocers and others throughout the nation began stocking their shelves with coffee supplies for the rationing program which begins at midnight next Sunday. All retail coffee supplies in the country were frozen as of midnight Saturday.

Today, tomorrow and Wednesday Richland county institutional coffee consumers will register at the rationing board offices. Dates for the registration of hotels and restaurants had not been fixed today. Domestic consumers, other than those not having war ration book No. 1, or the sugar book, will not be required to register at this time but all applying for the Jan. 3 ration period will be required to declare the amount of coffee on hand as of Nov. 22.

Beginning next Monday rationing coupons No. 20 through 29 in your sugar book will be good for coffee purchases on the basis of one pound every five weeks for each adult 15 years old or over.

Over-buying of food products by householders fearful of future hoarding programs may force the government into adopting anti-hoarding regulations.

An official disclosed in Washington today that "panic-buying" of foods and other commodities has become widespread enough to give the Office of Price Administration concern.

"The hysteria seems to be getting near the point where we are forced to consider the rationing of things that otherwise wouldn't have to be rationed," explained the federal official, who declined the use of his name.

The proposed anti-hoarding regulation now under study by the OPA, he said, would compel purchasers to declare their present supply of any rationed article they bought. Any such regulation, he added, would be difficult to enforce since the OPA has no idea of invading private homes to inspect food stocks.

Back From Bengasi Flight

While on a bombing trip over Bengazi, Libya, this American B-24 bomber met a terrific amount of anti-aircraft fire. The shells nearly tore away the left aileron, severed two control cables, and punctured the plane with 200 holes. Capt. Harold W. Edmonds, the pilot, points to some of the holes after the ship arrived at her base, almost a thousand miles from Bengasi.

Plan to Ring Old Bell to Mark End Of World War II

KENTON, O. —(INS)— Hardin county's old courthouse bell which hasn't been heard since its song of peace was heard on Nov. 11, 1918, probably will be rung again, this time at the end of the present world conflict.

Although it has no place in the county's new courthouse, the old bell reposes in a relic room apparently awaiting a time when it again will be called upon to toll the home-town residents that bandits with designs on world domination have been whipped.

W. Dow Wagner, who was assisted by the late Claude Osbun in ringing the bell 24 years ago, is planning to take part in the future ceremonies.

ites — added on prince of theatrical peasants known as The Mad Russian.

Forty of Bert Gordon's 45 years have been spent in show business, which is more reason than most have for reminiscing in print. Bert is on the verge. He'll tell all in a tome called "Ring Up the Curtain," on which he has been laboring these lonely, unpixilated evenings since he gave up the cards and the polka-dotted ivories.

"Since I quit gambling," he said, "there's been nothing for me to do in Hollywood. I read and I write."

THE Mad Russian, you see, is not authentically mad. He is, like so many comics, a little sad around the eyes when not working at being mad, and he doesn't work at it on days. But he's genuinely Russian, at least in descent. His father was a reverend cantor from the old country who brought his mixed family to New York's East Side and there increased his progeny — including Bert among the later arrivals.

Bert got his early theatrical training on the sidewalks of New York along with Georgie Price, Jessel and Winchell, and fell or jumped into the hands of the old-time impresario of youth, Gus Edwards. For a while he was of the "school days" gang, emerged eventually into things like "Six Stage-Struck Kids," Nine Krazy Kids" and other kiddishness. So it went on, through vaudeville and the revues and musical comedy, and marriage to a Ziegfeld beauty, and divorce, and now Hollywood, movies, the air, and litra-chure.

"Seven years ago I was broke," he says, "from the cards and the dice. I quit, but I've got a memory. Once I took Arnold Rothstein for $12,000. I gave $3,000 to my wife for her Christmas shopping. I put $500 in my pocket, I locked the rest away in the hotel vault and I was through with gambling. I walked the streets and didn't know what to do with myself. But the Rothstein boys waited for me. The game was right in the hotel. Pretty soon I was cleaned again."

ONCE Gregory Ratoff, casting a musical show, interviewed Bert, asked his salary. "A grand a week," said Bert. Ratoff snorted. "For $1,000 a week, I work for you!" That ended that—until later. Bert finally did "Girl Crazy."

Eventually Gordon made a movie, a bad one. Strictly from hunger, he took up selling advertising to actors. He met Eddie Cantor. "If you can take a salesman named Einstein and make him a sensation as Parkyakarkus, what could you do with a comedian?" he asked Cantor put him and and soon — because Bert wanted a trademark—there evolved "The Mad Russian."

Nelson Takes Full Control of War Output

ADMIRAL KING 64 TODAY, BUT HE'LL FIGHT ON

Reaches Retirement Age With Prospect of Toughest Work Ahead of Him.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON — Admiral Ernest J. King, tough boss of America's toughest naval war, today reached the age at which most officers retire, but for him there was no prospect of an easy chair by the fireside until victory is won.

It seemed rather than in the months ahead his two-man job would become even more complex and demanding, for every new Allied advance, every opening of some new battlefront, means an additional burden on Allied lifelines, and guarding those supply routes is the navy's foremost task in this global war.

King became 64 today, and associates described him as being in excellent health despite the responsibilities which ordinarily demand at least nine busy hours a day of planning, staff meetings and decisions affecting the fate of scores of ships and thousands of men. Sometimes his days run to 18 or 20 hours of work.

Sixty-four is the legal retirement age for all officers except those of top rank with active command. The law provides that the exceptions — men like King—should not be subject to retirement until their work is finished, and King's seven-ocean job is just getting well underway.

The slender, sharp-eyed admiral came to Washington last December from command of the Atlantic fleet to assume the duties of commander of the United States fleet. In March there was added to this assignment that of chief of naval operations. He organized two staffs, one for each of his two functions, and has been, ever since, the sole director of all naval activities, subject only to President Roosevelt and Secretary Knox.

King arrived here with a reputation for being eminently fair-minded but completely hard-boiled in his demands for performance. Navy men summed it up by saying he "ran a taut ship," and he still does.

When there is a battle to be fought the naval commander in the area fights it. King plans the overall strategy which anticipates the foe's move or initiates some American naval venture. "His moves are coordinated, as necessary, with the plans of the army and of our Allies.

BRITISH TRIPLE BOMBER OUTPUT

Cripps Takes Charge of Air Weapons Production In Cabinet Shakeup.

(By International News Service)

LONDON—As Great Britain's production of heavy bombers reached a rate triple that of last year, Sir Stafford Cripps, England's lord privy seal and leader of the house of commons, today took up his new duties as minister of aircraft production.

Sir Stafford relinquished his posts and stepped down from minister's rank in the war cabinet yesterday to replace Col. J. J. Llewellin as director of Britain's aircraft production which, Llewellin said, had increased the output of heavy bombers to three times that of last year.

In a sudden and completely unexpected revision of the British political setup, Cripps was replaced in the war cabinet by Herbert Morrison, who remains home secretary and minister of home security.

Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden, retaining that post, will take over Cripps' leadership of commons, while Lord Cranborne, secretary of state for the colonies, inherits Cripps' title of lord privy seal.

Col. Llewellin has been appointed to a newly-created post of resident minister in Washington in charge of supply, linking more completely the American and British war effort.

Col. Oliver Stanley was appointed to Lord Cranborne's vacated post of colonial secretary.

WRITER, WOUNDED 11 TIMES AT ORAN, RECEIVES PURPLE HEART

(By United Press)

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, ORAN, Algeria —(Delayed)—Leo S. Disher, United Press war correspondent, was given the army's Purple Heart today "for extraordinary heroism and meritorious performance of duty" in the battle of Oran harbor.

Disher, seriously wounded in the battle, stood with the aid of crutches while Maj. Gen. Lloyd R. Fredendall, commanding United States forces in the Oran area, pinned the medal on his field jacket.

It had been announced at Baudens hospital that Disher was wounded nine times when with the Allied forces. He went into Oran harbor under a deadly fire from French batteries in one of two old coast guard cutters assigned to crash the harbor boom. It turned out that he actually had 11 wounds and 15 superficial scratches from shrapnel and bullets.

The award was made a few hours before Disher was to be taken to London by plane.

Disher's citation read:

"Leo Sidwers Disher, jr., while serving with a United States landing force in the capacity of war correspondent at Oran harbor during the early morning hours of Nov. 8, 1942, distinguished himself by extraordinary heroism and meritorious performance of duty against an armed enemy during the attack on that port.

"In the face of enemy withering fire, although several times wounded, Disher remained at his post on the vessel which was taking him ashore and continued to report for the public press a lucid, accurate, detailed account of the action in which the greater part of the military and naval personnel aboard the ship were casualties.

"After being ordered to abandon ship Disher swam to shore and though again wounded four times continued to perform his duty in an exemplary manner."

Arrest Two Cooks In Poisonings At Oregon Hospital

SALEM, Ore.—(INS)—Two cooks at the state mental hospital in Salem were under arrest today in connection with the fatal poisoning of 47 patients at the hospital following a death menu of scrambled eggs last week.

District Attorney M. B. Hayden said he would file a charge of involuntary manslaughter against A. B. McKillop, assistant cook. Mrs. Mary O'Hare, head cook at the institution, was held as an accessory after the fact.

The two employes were arrested after they confessed they had known since last Wednesday night that a large quantity of deadly roach powder had been accidentally dumped into a batter of scrambled eggs. Nearly 500 patients at the institution were made violently ill, in addition to the 47 deaths.

The insect powder had been mistaken for powdered milk by a "working" patient, George Alan Nosen, police said.

CREATION OF 'LITTLE WPB' BARES MOVE

Chairman Names Aircraft Unit Without Waiting Approval of Army or Navy.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON—Creation of a "Little WPB" for aircraft was interpreted today as evidence of Donald M. Nelson's determination to take complete control of war production int his own hands during the critical months ahead.

Although Nelson nominally was made chief of the nation's war production into his own hands durmuch of the control actually has been exercised by the army services with WPB serving primarily in the materials field.

Last week, however, the WPB chairman announced that the job of directng production of upward of 100,000 planes in 1943 had been turned over to Charles E. Wilson, WPB vice chairman and former president of General Electric.

Nelson made the announcement without waiting for approval of the action by the army and navy. Even yet, it was learned, the armed services have not countersigned Nelson's directive transferring complete responsibility for aircraft production to Wilson.

Approval of the services is unnecessary, however, under terms of President Roosevelt's executive order vesting production control with Nelson and the WPB chief at last appears determined to exercise the powers belonging to him.

Wilson will head a four man board composed of himself, Maj. Gen. Oliver P. Echols, of the army air corps; Rear Admiral Joseph Davison, of the navy bureau of aeronautics and Harold E. Talbott, chief of the WPB aircraft division.

"I have vested all of my power over aircraft production in Wilson," Nelson said.

The new setup actually places the armed services in an advisory capacity as far as production is concerned and supersedes the aircraft scheduling units located at Wright Field, Dayton, Ohio.

In the future, the armed services will devote themselves to determining what types of planes are needed, how many shall be produced and when they will be required, and from there on the production job will be up to the WPB.

TUG BOAT GETS FINE NICKNAME

Unsinkable Mrs. Brown Gets Off Ocean Bottom Twice, Carries on In Fight.

By GLADWIN HILL

LONDON—(AP)—This is a story about Mrs Brown, a tug boat which has been sunk by enemy bombs, but which today is carrying on pert as ever for his majesty's navy in the Mediterranean

Mrs. Brown is not her real name—the enemy doubtless would like to know the identity of such an indefatigable ship I just named her that after the celebrated wife of Leadville Johnny who, as followers of Colorado lore know, was so famed for her buoyancy she was known as the "Unsinkable Mrs. Brown"

In the Greek campaign, naval officers related, a bomb opened up Mrs. Brown's plates, and down to the bottom she went.

The skipper engaged a salvage company, and after six weeks she was refloated. Repairs had just been started when the Allied evacuation of Greece began.

The skipper dumped cement into the bottom to plug up the leaks, and with only a bosun, a consular official and two Greek soldiers instead of the normal crew of 12, left for a British port.

In the western Mediterranean another bomb sent her to the bottom once more There she lay for more than a year, but the skipper insisted on salvaging her

After months of work he got her half way up when she threatened to turn turtle, and he released her He tried again, finally surfaced her, scraped the rust out of the motors and got them running

Although Mrs Brown was half crippled and loggy with cement, the skipper sailed for drydock, and after arrival it took a week just to clear her of water.

Today officials announced that Mrs. Brown is afloat again, her cabin freshly painted, some of the original furniture still in place, and in command of her a skipper whose firm jaw portrays his determination to prosecute the war

You can see why I am tempted to name her after the Unsinkable Mrs Brown

Danny Finds War's Thriller Even As General's Secretary

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK—(AP)—He wrote his mother gaily that he'd "be with the general and general's don't get hurt"—but Danny Herr, wounded, and his scrappy general had to swim half a mile to safety when Jap planes sank their trawler off the New Guinea cost on Nov 16

The Daily News last night revealed the story of Danny, their former reporter and "one of the nicest little guys who ever began a newspaper career as a copy boy on this newspaper."

Danny, they said, was a warrant officer and private secretary to the fire-eating general, name censored, who saved his life

The two went overboard after their trawler was sunk, Danny with his legs injured but his lifebelt keeping him afloat The general made a brief stop on a dinghy where he blazed away at the Jap planes with a rifle, then he went overboard again and struck out for shore half a mile away.

At about this time, he spotted Danny, helpless to do much maneuvering, with the Jap planes overhead firing at him. He swam to Danny's assistance, and the two, making frequent dives to duck bullets, made shore safely.

The news said Danny, five feet five inches and weighing not much more than 100 pounds an "unlikely looking draftee," was inducted on Jan 15, 1941, and assigned to Fort Bragg S C, just a rookie He became a corporal, then a sergeant, then, at another camp, he was made a master sergeant and secretary to the general

After he reached Australia with the general, he got the rank of warrant officer, highest non-commissioned rank It was from Australia he wrote his mother, Mrs Minnie Herr, 61, of Huron, Ohio, about his sedate prospects with his general

Mrs. Herr, who was in New York today, took the news of his wounds and his rescue bravely, and said.

"I knew he was only fooling about not getting hurt, but I haven't worried and I won't now"

AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER

MANSFIELD, OHIO, MONDAY, NOVEMBER 23, 1942.

Odd, that nobody asked about your "use tax" stamp number until gasoline rationing came along.

That fine old slogan, "See America First," has been temporarily amended to "There's no place like home."

OPA is out with the bright suggestion that "a cold bath will make the house seem warmer"—and it may be well to keep in mind that snow will relieve frostbite.

New Work for Governor Lehman

THERE had been some hope, faint as it may have been, that when the time came for appointment of a relief administrator for countries ravaged by Axis aggression the colossal task would be assigned to former President Herbert Hoover, who gained broad experience in that field of activity as food administrator during the first World war and who was chosen for other important posts by former President Woodrow Wilson and his successors in office.

Without doubt, Herbert H. Lehman, New York governor, close friend and ardent supporter of President Roosevelt, who has been appointed to that position, will make an earnest effort to learn the things that he must know in order to do the work that will be necessary during and after the war, yet, as he said following announcement of his appointment, the problems facing him "are all very new," and there will be much to learn.

Age could scarcely have influenced President Roosevelt in his selection of inexperienced Governor Lehman in preference to widely experienced Herbert Hoover for this position as Mr. Hoover is only four years the senior of 64-year-old Mr. Lehman and both may be considered physically and mentally competent for the post.

The appointment, however, follows the course of President Roosevelt in confining appointments to positions of great responsibility to personal friends and political supporters rather than calling upon men best qualified for specific tasks, regardless of personal or partisan bias.

Outstanding examples of this policy, if any are needed, is placement of Harry L. Hopkins in the important position of lend-lease administrator, and retention of Frances Perkins in the cabinet position of secretary of labor.

Helpful to Governor Lehman, as he enters upon his difficult new work, will be the two articles by Herbert Hoover in current issues of Colliers, in which a comprehensive review is given of methods employed in administering relief during and after the first World war, coupled with an informative analysis of present needs and suggestions as to how they can be best and most effectively met.

Child Victims of Hunting Accidents

REPORTS of hunting accidents that have been coming in during the past few days show a distressingly high percentage of boys in the 11 to 14 age range killed or injured by careless handling of firearms.

Coming in close association with the imminent draft of 18- and 19-year-old youths into military service, it may appear that dangers encountered in the army, after proper training, will be no greater than the commonly accepted risks involved in hunting, or even in motoring.

There are valid arguments against dangerous firearms being permitted in the hands of irresponsible children, but if a person of any age is to be entrusted with such responsibility—as is being regularly done—it seems reasonable to assume that a period of training would be advantageous.

The desire for adventure is probably as strong in a 10-year-old boy as at any later time in life, and with an inherited liking for hunting, it is quite understandable that small boys feel quite competent to handle a gun—although results frequently prove contrary.

A thing that is not always considered is that when a hunting trip is made, life is as surely risked as it is in military service.

Penalty of Uncontrolled Debt

DURING the year ending June 30, 1943, the government expects to have to pay bills which will total around $75,000,000,000. All of this vast sum cannot be secured by taxation. A good part, $25,000,000,000 or more, will have to be borrowed. The government will have to borrow it in many ways, chiefly from commercial banks.

Bank managements are accomplishing their part of the war financing task with unsurpassed excellence. But the public is not doing its part fully, as yet. There is a definite limit on the amount of government bonds the banks can absorb without endangering the security of the country.

Sale of billions of dollars of war bonds must be made directly to the public if the American system of representative government and free enterprise is to be preserved.

More Things To 'Do Without'

NOW the War Production Board has cracked down on production of kitchen gadgets. Culinary tools and utensils made of iron or steel are out for the duration. And if any woman thinks she can get copper frying pans, coffee pots, and so on, it is just too bad. If the war board means what it says, there won't be even a dipper or bread box or bottle opener, or any of a hundred other things dear to a housewife's heart, that can be produced for the duration. About all that can be made is a can opener, and the handle of that must be of plastic or wood.

It should be added, however, that the immediate future is not so bad as it seems, because stores and manufacturers still have a lot of kitchen equipment on hand. But metallic utensils of all kinds must be conserved.

Here's Another Salvaging Job

JEFF DAVIS, who rejoices in the title of "King of the Hoboes," is trying to round up bums and tramps and get them into useful war work. "We're collecting old scrap and tin cans," he says, "and now why don't we salvage some of the human wrecks who live in the missions and flop houses?"

It is a timely suggestion. There are too many human beings lying around on metaphorical scrap heaps. This is a time when every possible worker is needed, and there is also a spirit in the air which should help to restore some human wrecks to useful work and self-respect.

Credit should be given where due, and it is gratifying to note that no New Dealer is thus far pressing for an appropriation to put roadside parks along the new Alaskan highway.

Speeding Synthetic Rubber Plans

—By CARTER FIELD

WASHINGTON—A few days ago representatives of the four big rubber companies met with government representatives at Akron to agree upon the management of The government wanted the companies to agree among themselves as to how this management would be divided, which of the new production plants would be managed by the experts of which of the four big companies.

One of the first questions asked by one of the company representatives at the Akron meeting was:

"Will Thurman Arnold let us do this?"

He was told by government representatives that Thurman Arnold had virtually given the green light to anything done in the effort to produce synthetic rubber.

Before the government men had left Washington, on Nov. 16, however, there had been anxious moments about this. Knowing that Arnold was harassing the Aluminum company, the Associated Press, the railroads, the oil companies, and many others who were concerned with the war effort, there was concern lest the official government trust buster would hamper the effort to get the right men in direction of the complicated and delicate operation of producing something for Mr. and Mrs. America to use for tires, not to mention supply the army and navy with a needed substitute for rubber.

WHEN the statement was made, by a very high official, that Arnold had given the green light to the synthetic rubber "cartel" he was asked by a cynical friend:

"Do you think Arnold has seen the light?"

The official pondered a moment. "No," he said slowly, "but I think he has been forced to yield."

There ought to be more of this conversation It ought to continue, showing WHO forced Arnold to yield—though of course the assumption is it was the president, since his immediate chief, Atty.-Gen. Biddle, obviously has been back of Arnold in his harassing of production. It ought to continue, also, to disclose whether Arnold is to be stopped from interfering with any other alleged combinations in restraint of trade, where the combinations, consultations, etc., are plainly in the interest of eliminating waste motion and increasing war production.

But unfortunately that is all the writer knows about this conversation. He was more or less lucky to hear that much.

It reveals an interesting point, in addition to the chief disclosure—that Arnold has been curbed at least once in his straffing activities: Arnold is constantly contending that his anti-trust suits do not take up the time of the men directing production, but only the lawyers of the big corporations.

But it is obviously from this glance into the background of the synthetic rubber situation that he not only wastes the time and energy of CORPORATION officials, but that his activities actually result in considerable worry and concern on the part of the GOVERNMENT officials charged with direction production in the harassed lines!

TODAY IN HISTORY

Pike's Peak, famous mountain of the Rocky Mountains in El Paso county, Colorado, was sighted this date in 1806 by an exploring party headed by Lieut. Zebulon M. Pike. Though surpassed in altitude by many summits in the State, few have so commanding a location and none is so well known. At the base of the mountain are Manitou and Colorado Springs, whence tourists can make the ascent on horseback, by cog-railway or by automobile road.

Man About Manhattan

After Many Years

—By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK—O. Henry would have liked this story told by Howard Townsend, a husky, bespectacled gentleman from Nebraska who sits at the nerve center of the AP Wirephoto system.

When Howard was a youngster in rural Nebraska his show-going was limited to revival meetings and summer chautauquas, so instead of the Girl on the Police Gazette he worshipped the stars of the sawdust trail. One of them was Maude Kendall Mailey, who sang both for evangelists and in chautauqua throughout the midwest.

It was a great day for Howard when in 1921 his parents were invited to Maude's home at Lincoln, and were given a concert in the parlor. In private life Maude was Mrs. Boileau, and Howard held her baby on his lap while she sang.

Thereafter he lost track of the family, and in the course of time became a New York newspaperman. Now he could see and hear and mingle with the stars of Broadway, and when he saw George Jessel's vaudeville review he was thrilled, he says, by the sweet singing of one Lucille Norman. It was just like in the old days, listening to Maude Kendall Mailey in a chautauqua tent in Nebraska.

And then, at a supper party, he met Lucille Norman. The talk became reminiscent, because midwesterners in New York love to talk about their homes. Lucille Norman smiled. "I was that baby you held on your lap," she said. "My last name is Boileau."

MAYBE you other chautauqua fans would like to know, as Howard learned, that Maude Kendall Mailey still is alive, and that her home is in Culver City, California. Howard thinks her daughter can't miss. The Jessel show is Lucille's first stage appearance of any importance, but she has done considerable radio work, here and in Denver and Cincinnati.

Last Dec. 7 her big chance came on a national hookup, and she was just beginning her song when the program was cut for a special news bulletin. You don't have to be told what it was about. But a film talent scout had heard enough and Lucille was signed for a part in "For Me and My Gal."

CANNY Xavier Cugat, who never misses a chance to earn an honest penny, owns a new orchestra. He sees a coming trend in music, and he intends to be on the ground floor. The new band, directed by a pretty girl who calls herself Dolores, had its opening at the Essex House hotel the other night and it did rather well, I thought.

What makes the band unusual, and Mr. X alert, is that the new Latin-tempo band directed by Dolores has both male and female musicians. Cugat already has lost six men from his own band (make no mistake, Cugat's band is still very much in business) to the armed services, and he thinks that before the war is over there will be a lot of mixed bands.

Timely Editorial

Sound Advice.

Mark A. Brown, Chicago banker and a War Production board financial adviser, had reason for emphatically admonishing bankers against repeating stories discreditable to the Washington War Government unless they are sure the stories are true. "I have been amazed at some of the things I have heard bankers say," he stated.

It is the same message which necessarily is being addressed to every good American citizen. Things pass from mouth to mouth that are proved, when run down to their sources, to have been "planted" by enemy propaganda. Men bearing private financial responsibilities, as Brown pointed out, should be among the first to guard their mouths carefully. What they say is taken as "gospel truth" by many of their customers.—Detroit News.

Interpreting the War News

Hitler Striking Power Still Great But Defeat Next Year Is Possible

—By DE WITT MACKENZIE

CAIRO—I find most gratifying the air of solid confidence in both British and American military headquarters on the Nile as the chase of the disorganized Axis forces continues westward across the Libyan desert into the crimson glow of Hitler's setting sun.

Now of course figures of speech are among the world's greatest liars and must be used with great reserve. So I hasten to add that it is with deliberation that I refer to the master gangster's sinking sun, for it most assuredly has passed its zenith, considering all aspects of the European war.

Still, while confidence among our captains of the war is 100 per cent, there is not the slightest disposition to underrate the magnitude of the task ahead of us. The Boche has plenty of fight left in him and his striking power is great despite his losses.

It is true that the only way we can lose now is through Allied errors in judgment, but a major mistake now might prove disastrous.

In assaying the Libyan position we must recognize that Rommel's sensational flight is impelled by tactical necessity rather than fear. He is a rash man who, even in hatred, claims the German soldier is afraid to stand and fight.

Present indications are that Hitler has no intention of causing North Africa to be abandoned without another stand.

Air power is becoming increasingly important as the battle swells to a climax with the Allies pressing the Axis from west and east.

The Allies, already superior in the air, are gaining strength as they advance into enemy territory.

AT THIS crucial juncture, Lieut. Gen. Frank M. Andrews, famous air exponent, has arrived to take command of United States Army forces in the Middle East. It is my observation that he is swinging into action fast.

I had an interesting chat with the general a couple of nights ago and while one isn't privileged to quote him I came away with the impression that American experts are looking forward to the fascinating possibilities of bombing both Italy and German territory from North African airports as soon as the present drive is over.

I talked with many great military men in recent weeks and the almost unanimous view was that if we are to force Hitler to his knees next year—and that is held to be possible—the first requirement is that he be rendered impotent in western Europe and Germany by heavy bombing of his industrial centers and communications.

Only when this has been done will it be possible to stage a land invasion of France.

Nazi Airpower Is Major Mystery As Disaster Stalks Hitler Forces

—By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

THE PAST week-end marked an Axis war anniversary Herr Hitler has not forgotten but will not celebrate. It was November 22, 1941, that his armies rolled into Rostov-on-Don. That was the high-water mark of his Russian campaign of that year.

A week later his troops rolled out of Rostov again, in retreat. What he has since recorded as his darkest hour of the war was upon him with the Russian winter.

Within recent weeks Hitler has recapitulated events of that dread winter of '41 to tell his people "it cannot happen again." Yet by every available yardstick this Nov. 22 dawned more ominously for his made-in-Berlin Axis. Disaster is stalking it not in Russia alone, but in Africa, at sea, in China and in the far Pacific.

A full-powered Allied invasion threat actually is knocking thunderously at its European southern postern gate from North Africa. Before this winter ends, its counterparts may be hammering also from the west across the English channel and the North sea. In the Pacific, Japanese sea power, the vital weapon on that front, is being bled white by American victories.

And in unconquered and unconquerable Russia itself a storm is also brewing. Still at bay short of his objectives in the Volga-Don corridor and in the Caucasus as another winter closes in, Hitler must know that the deadliest Allied attack of all is in the making. Red armies inured to winter, of proven skill and unrivaled courage, are massing for attack, not defense. And no delaying water hazard need be spanned from the east as from the south or the west.

YET THERE are two other factors in the war situation at this moment which may be giving Hitler even graver concern. They are the air power he can still muster and maintain to meet his expanding defense needs and the fuel oil resources on which he can depend to power his mechanized armies and operate his war industries.

The major mystery of the war at this crucial stage is Nazi air power. There is growing suspicion that it has been an overrated element in the Allied problem for months if not from the outset of the war.

Most recent British unofficial estimates credited Hitler last October with approximately 5,000 first line planes of all types. Half of them were supposed to be in the east, 1,500 engaged in the Volga-Caucasus battles alone.

The other 2,500 by this estimate were variously distributed. Some 400 were with Rommel in Africa and another 400 covering the Mediterranean with Malta as their prime target. Another 800, a majority of them fighters, appeared based in France and the Low Countries, some 200 in northern Norway endeavoring to cripple Russia's Murmansk supply route and 500 or more retained in Germany to meet British air raids.

That British calculation obviously flowed from careful appraisal of the degree of enemy air strength encountered by the Allies on each front and there are many things to indicate that it comes much closer to the truth than vague reports that Hitler has 50,000 or even 100,000 combat planes still at his call. And if it is anywhere near accurate, his present plight is far more serious than the most optimistic Allied calculations have yet dared venture to guess.

LACK of air power to match Allied concentrations was a primary cause of the disaster that has overtaken the Axis in Egypt and Libya. It underscores the initial and expanding success of the American-British surge eastward from French Africa.

Except at Stalingrad, over Malta, and on the Murmansk supply route there has been no evidence of strong German air concentrations this year. Where is the vaunted Luftwaffe?

Watching Trends

WASHINGTON—British military experts here are enthusiastic about a new weapon they are turning out by the hundreds of thousands.

It's not a "secret weapon," but its potentialities are considered almost as great as if it were.

It's the Sten gun, designed by a British lieutenant colonel and a draughtsman.

Let me give you the gasper first. It's a sub-machine gun that fires at the rate of 500 rounds a minute and costs only a bit more than $8.

IF YOU don't think the British are convinced they have something there, give a thought to the fact that they already have manufactured more than a million and are still turning them out at top speed.

The Ministry of Supply calls it "the most revolutionary gun ever produced in such a short time."

First impressions, say the British experts, are that it looks like an ugly piece of drain-pipe discarded by the plumber. But, they claim, men who never held a gun before have been able to rip a target to shreds with one at 30 yards and make effective hits at much greater distances.

It fires from a clip, carrying 32 rounds of 9 MM, round-nose, rimless ammunition; cools while the clip is being changed (about the same length of time it would take to reload an Army automatic); weighs about six and a half pounds and is only 30 inches long.

It is cheaper than the tommy-gun (which costs around $200); and is a possible replacement for that and the automatic pistol.

THE Sten gun is already being issued to the British Home Guard. It's simplicity (it has only 59 parts—less than half the number of the tommy-gun) makes it a perfect weapon for civilian or home guard use in close-fighting.

There is one even more important possibility for the Sten gun than equipping the Home Guard and tank crews. Dozens of them can be dropped in parachutes, with ammunition attached.

With the United Nations knocking on the doors of occupied Europe with its millions of potential but unarmed allies, the Sten gun may some day prove to be worth its weight in gold.

A Farmer's Diary

Letter to Mother

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

I DROVE by a friend's farm home and saw a star in the center of a small windowpane. I stopped, for I knew the boy it represented. Two years ago we walked together over rugged hills and quiet meadows, and talked. He seemed so young. His dark eyes snapped when we came upon something new. He asked many questions that I did not know how to answer.

His mother opened the large door wide, when I knocked, and welcomed me graciously. "Why yes, I got a letter from John last Friday morning. Took it two weeks to get through. I'll always keep it, for it's the best one he ever wrote. Maybe you'd like to read it."

She opened the worn pages of an old Bible on the stand and handed me the letter. The envelope had no stamp. When I unfolded the sheets, I saw stains where moisture had dampened the paper.

"Somewhere Near Australia,
Oct. 24

Dearest Mother—Your letters came two weeks ago—four of them. I didn't know which to read first so I opened them all and read the last one first, and it was the best. I'm resting here for a few weeks—then the Big Name says I can go back. To see nurses and doctors around from close home is fine, I think.

It's terrible hot and if there weren't any screens, I guess the big mosquitoes would eat you up. I can hear the ocean beating against the shore. Jungles are all around us, but everybody's used to it.

Now mother, don't worry. I am getting along fine. Every day I think of what a fine home we've had together—these black woolly natives don't know what a home means, and I pity them. The longer I'm here the more I think America is worth fighting for.

Last Thanksgiving I was home and I thought I was thankful for what was ours, but I didn't know how shallow and meaningless my expressions were! The flag floats on a stubby pole just outside my window. I was proud to march wherever I saw it lead.

I am thankful that I'm American—that I carry with me always the memories of a free, happy childhood; that I have had a Christian father and mother; that I was taught the fine things of the Bible; that the sweetness of a mother's love comes clear around the world to me; that God is never far away.

Mother, I know I am coming home again and what I have written comforts me because it gives me a way to express my feelings to one, like you, who understands. Write. Lovingly,

JOHN."
